(From the Sydney Mail.) A PLEASANT story is told of the manner in which the news of the approach of the Armada was received by the English Commanders; for the truth of which we cannot youch, but at least it is very characteristic. Clarendon tells us with quaint humour that—" one Fleming, a Scotch private, though a very honest man" was chased into Plymouth by the Spanish vanguard. On taking shelter there he went to inform Lord Howard of what a narrow escape he had, and how close the experience. Howard of what a narrow escape he had, and how close the enemy was. He found Howard, Hawkins, and Drake playing at bowls on Plymouth green, and on giving his information of the nigh approach of their formidable foe, the two former, who had been winning, were for leaving their game and going on board at once. "No, no," said Drake, "I must have my chance of winning, we have time grouph to flight our of winning; we have time enough to finish our play and go and beat the Spaniards after-wards." The anecdote is probably true, and if so, shows in an eminent degree the quiet deter-mination of the man, and how he evidently thought that, as a small hole will sink a great ship, so the least haste or timidity may swamp a great enterprise. Unlike Raleigh, Drake appears to be nothing but a scaman, but there stood in the very first rank. He was no poet, no philosopher, no dreamer of El Dorados, nor founder of colonies; but a stern, resolute, homely Englishman, who knew his duty to his country and did it. Raleigh, on the other hand, was unequalled in all the above, at home at sea as on shore; in the Council Chamber, or a lady's, spreading his costly cloak with all the grace a high-bred gentleman before the feet of Eliza-beth, or rallying and leading his men through fire and water at the assault of Fayal. Inditing a history of the world in prison or a sonnet in the Mermaid Tavern, likely enough with Shakspears and Ben Joneon at his elbow with the Mermaid Tavern, likely enough with Shakspeare and Ben Jonson at his elbow, and last and best giving the most profound and enlightened advice to his young friend Prince Henry, the eldest son of the man who slew him, the hope of the Stuart line, and who for Britain's sins was taken too early from her. All these great qualities made up the character of Raleigh, perhaps to an extent only surpassed by Cæsar. Yet it must be borne in mind that by Cæsar. Yet it must be borne in mind that Drake was no common man; less polished than the other, he had sterling good sense, and if he did not write poems and histories, nor found colonies, nor we dare say was a very brilliant ornament at the court of a virgin queen, his voyage round the world proves him a navigator of the highest order, and his letters show that at least he could write sound sense and English which is more sometimes than more boastful pens can do. In one letter to Lord Walsing-ham, written during the various conflicts with the Armada, he shows a dash of the keen, but the Armada, he shows a dash of the keen, but rough English humour of the time. The fleet got short of powder, and Drake tells the secretary that had he but had enough of that valuable article, he would have made the Duke of Medina Sidonia, the Spanish Commander-in Chief, "wish himself among his orange trees at Lucca." A courtier like Raleigh would never have written that clause; equally brave and fearless of his words as Sir Francis, still he had a great respect for rank and the good which might accrue to him from assiduously respecting age of twenty-two, he was master of the Judith, under Sir John Hawkins, and that having behaved most gallantly against the Spaniards in the Gulph of Mexico, he returned to England with much renown, but not worth a single groat. Afterwards, he was more fortunate in money-matters, for at several times he captured money-matters, for at several times he captured a Spanish treasure ship, one being the vessel carrying the money of the Armada. His buccaneering spirit however, was very nigh getting his admiral—Lord Howard—into trouble with the Armada, for having received orders to carry lights, so as to direct the pursuit up channel, Drake falling in with some vessels belonging to the Hanse-towns gave chase, and Howard gradually overhauling the lights he saw ahead, found himself towards daylight in the very heart of the enemy's fleet. This shows the necessity of strict obedience to orders at sea, for although Nelson twice disobeyed, and twice through disobedience won a victory, he did so at the risk of his life, or, at least of his position, and, seeing the exception makes the rule, and at the risk of his life, or, at least of his position, and, seeing the exception makes the rule, and that we are not all Nelson's, it is better to hold by the old maritime proverb—"obey orders and break owners." Sir John Hawkins, the confederate of the two English leaders, and a captain under whom Drake served, was a man of the most intrepid courage, moreover, he was an older and more experienced officer. he was an older and more experienced officer had. However, there is one unlucky stigma attached to his name, and that is—what of late years has turned men's minds into fire and made them forget the feelings God has given them—slavery. He appears to have been the first Englishman who commenced that traffic. As we all know the end has been bad enough. Hawkins in the story of the Armada, seems to have taken but a second place, but where all behaved with such distinguished courage it is invidious to draw comparisons. It appears that Drake and Hawkins instituted between them that fund for decayed and disabled seamen called "the chest at Chatham," by which means sound and healthy sailors were enabled to subscribe to the support of their less fortu-

Now that we have reached this brilliant point Now that we have reached this orilinant point in England's naval history, when she so humbled the power of Spain, it may be necessary to speak of the kind of vessels possessed by the two contending parties. As we before observed, no dockyards ever turned out finer vessels than the Spanish. Even in the days of the Armada their ships were noted all over the Armada, their ships were noted all over Europe for size and beauty of model; and in later days the British seamen were enthusiastic in admiration of the stately Dons. Nelson in describing the San Josef captured by himself at 8t. Vincent, calls her the finest ship in the world, and even in our days of Yankee and Scotch clippers, the beautifully rounded lines of the graceful hull of the Spanish three-decker, would take first place as a specimen of naval An ancient tapestry in the House of Lords gives us a very good idea of the Spanish and English fleets, and their different kind of ships. Although the former on an average, was com-posed of vessels of much greater tonnage, still there were very large ones under the command of Lord Howard. The Triumph, commanded of Lord Howard. The Triumph, commanded by Sir John Hawkins, was 1000 tons, and manned by 380 seamen and 120 soldiers, the St. Matthew, was the same size, and several very nearly as large; but many on the other hand, were very small and light, indeed they seem to have been nothing but boats. Doubt-less the vessels furnished for the defence of the hand, were very small and light, indeed they seem to have been nothing but boats. Doubt-less the vessels furnished for the defence of the country by private gentlemen were of the smaller class, and indeed the Synnett, the least ship in the English fleet was of the ridiculous size of twenty tons. Still the lofty hulls of the Spanish ships offering a fair mark for the English cannon, they suffered in the different spice of tweet country to the suffered in the different spice of twenty tons. Still the lofty hulls of the Spanish ships offering a fair mark for the English cannon, they suffered in the different spice of tweet cloth sear the entrance (lastley of the shop;

combats much more than their antagonists. Compared much more than their antagonists.

Oars also according to the tapesty appear to have been used by some of the Spaniards, but there does not seem to have been any fighting by collision according to the plan of the ancient galleys, and who used their oars with terrible effect for that purpose.

As to the manœuvres during the various actions which took place in the Channel, the English commanders seem to have the entire advantage of their enemies, and then it was that the Spaniards must have felt the loss of such an able seaman as the Marquis de Santa Cruz, their first commander, and who died before the set out of the expedition. At the before the set out of the expedition. At the very commencement of the engagements, the Spanish Admiral committed the grave error of allowing the English to get the weather-gage of him, not through any superior tactics on the part of the latter, but actually through he himself running to leeward and thus giving the place of vantage to his enemy, who never lost it, but by repeated and desperate assaults continued pushing the invading fleet up Channel until they got hemmed in amongst the narrow waters of the straits of Dover. However, the Spanish leaders at last got their huge fleet into a disposable form and anchored off Calais. But Howard and his lieutenants had a remedy for this movement, for although beaten with the this movement, for although beaten with the loss of many ships and men, the Armada was still too gigantic a foe to be allowed to remain in the above position, so nigh to the mouth of the Thames. It was to that river where their whole force from the first was to be directed, and therefore placed as they were by anchoring off Calais, the English Commander had no alter-native but to make a decisive attempt to scatter them for good and all. Accordingly he adopted the best possible means to accomplish his desire, and where there was such a great discrepance and where there was such a great discrepancy in the relative power of the two fleets, namely, by turning some of his worst vessels into explosion and fire ships. Few people but those who have witnessed it can understand or indeed who have winnessed it can understand or indeed conceive the awful panic caused by a fire at sea. But when we imagine the horror and confusion aggravated ten-fold by many ships lying together, crowded with men, and full of the most explo-sive and combustible materials, about to be sive and combustible materials, about to be attacked by other ships full of the same, huge floating torches burning unquenchably, until the awful thunder and volcanic burst of their explosion destroys every living and inanimate thing for hundreds of yards around; when we consider all these things together with the manifold and miserable methods by which life is extinguished in such a scene, added to the awful uproar and entanglement of a dark night, which is always the time chosen for the empthich is always the time chosen for the always the time chosen for the ployment of such tactics, can we wonder that even the stoutest hearts and best managed fleet should become terror stricken and fall into should become terror stricken and fall into confusion. At least the Spaniards appear to have done so, for on being attacked by the English fire-ships, they lost heart entirely, and each steered to seek his own safety, several were burned and one large galleon ran on Calais Sands and was plundered by the English next day. This may be said to have ended the hopes of the ever-memorable Armada, for all the attempts of the remainder of that formidable fleet were more towards their own safety than attempts of the remainder of that formidable fleet were more towards their own safety than for the destruction or subjugation of others. And thus through the bigotry and ambition of her king, Spain lost the dominion of the sea, nor ever since has held up her head in the councils of the world as a first class power. The English seamen, for half a century afterwards, made terrible reprisals upon the Spaniards for this unwarrantable invasion, and by so doing created a bitterness of feeling which raged with fearful violence, especially amongst the Spanish possessions in America and the West India Islands. The lofty chivalry and soaring spirit of Raleigh, the nobleness of temper and dauntlessness of Drake were soon followed by a band of adventurers, of whom it behoves us to say something, and who have left a name at which the world most emphatically "grew pale;" we mean the terrible Buccaneers.

These men under various leaders and at mean the terrible Buccaneers.

These men under various leaders, and at These men under various leaders, and at various times considering any Spaniard fair play, and any Spanish property fair plunder, whether the home countries were at peace or war, at first began to ply their nefarious trade with something like a privateering commision for so doing, but which soon changed as the ships and the men got beyond the reach of all laws, human and divine, into a truly terrible and recognised system of piracy. From directing their operations as at first solely against the Spaniards, principally on account of the ing their operations as at first solely against the Spaniards, principally on account of the immense quantities of treasure passing from their mines in Mexico and Peru to Europe, these scourges of the Carribean sea and Spanish main, gradually like Ishmael began to turn their hands against every man, and of course every man's hand was soon against them.

DEATH BY DROWNING.—On Friday morning some excitement was caused by the report that Mr. Robert Griffin, a very old and well-known resident of the town, formerly carrying on an extensive baking business, had been found drowned in the river. The report proved to be correct, the body of the deceased being discovered floating in the river a little below the bridge, and near the site of the old slaughter-house; the place where the body was found being one of the deepest parts of the river. The body was conveyed by the Coroner's orders to the residence of the deceased in Pelmer-street, where an inquest was held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, before the Coroner and a jury of twelve. Upon a view of the bedy it was deemed desirable to make a post-mertem examination to discover whether deceased was living when he entered the water, and Dr. Fyffe proceeded to make the examination. Charles Crouch, aged 14, deposed to the discovery that morning of the body of a man floating in the river. Witness was on his way to school, and stopped at the river to throw at some fish; it was then about half-past 8 o'clock; he saw the man's head and shoulders out of the water only about two or three yards distant from the shore; he then ran and gave information of what he saw. James Gariand deposed: That morning about half-past 8 he was informed of a man being drowned in the river; he ran down to the river and saw a man's head and part of his back fleating above the surface on the side of the river near the old slaughter-bouse, about fifty yards from the continuation of Scorell-street; witness went up to the police station, and returned with the constable; these was no footpath there leading anywhere; it was a private paddeck; witness these deceased, who was a quiet, sensible man. Constable Brussans deposed to the recovery of the body in deep water; deceased and no cost on; his boots were united. Belocca Griffin, wife of Robert Griffin, deposed: Last saw her husband alive between 9 and 10 o'clock last n

LOWER MURRUMBIDGEE.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

October 13.—The Appraisements.—In my last notice I stated that the advance on the old rentals would be about 5 per cent. This was intended to apply only to the decisions of one court in reference to one district. Having now fuller materials to hand, I can state more general results. The advance in the Murrumbidgee district, No. 2, presided over by Mr. Carne, is upwards of 200 per cent.; in the Lachlan district about 100 per cent. The total renal fixed by the late appraisements to be paid by the squatters on the Murrumbidgee, may be taken, in round numbers, at about $20,000.

The Weather.—On Sunday and Monday we were visited by a parching hot wind, the effect of which must be most injurious. Yesterday and this morning, strange to say, we have had froats. Still, however, the dry weather continues, with at present no chance of rain. Dissatrous indeed will be the consequences if the long drought be not soon relieved. On the frontages there is no grass; in the back country, where there is grass, there is no water. In some instances, I hear, shearing has been discontinued, it being only starvation to keen the abeen for any time. country, where there is grass, there is no water. In some instances, I hear, shearing has been discontinued, it being only starvation to keep the sheep for any time confined to one spot. We shall have, I fear, larger number of stock travelling up and down the river this year, as the only chance of keeping them alive. Our crops and vegetation in general are also beginning to droop for want of rain. We can only acknowledge our helplessness, and implicit dependence on a superior power.

WEST MAITLAND ANNUAL RACES.

(Abridged from Saturday's Mercury.)

Winch's Lady Wildsir, £15.

Six horses started for this event. Fiirt and Wonder were the favourities; but not a few admired the little Lady Wildsir, whose light burden and good beneding were considered to give her a good chance of winning. A start was effected with but little difficulty, and the lot went away at racing speed—Wonder taking a alight lead, and Laty Wildsir hera. They changed positions frequently in the first half-nile, and on entering the straight running the lot had collected pretty well together. They passed the grand stand in a cluster, there not being two lengths between the first (Wonder) and last horse (Lady Wildsir). Immediately after passing the stand, the rider of Pigeon forced Ledy Wildsir, who was coming up inside Pigeon, almost against one of the posts, and the little mare, to avoid dealing against the post, had to run inside it. By this maneutres she was thrown out of all chance of the race, and into the rear of the whole field. Neverthelees, the boy continued the mare in the race. At the starting point. Pilit gallantly went to the front, and when the lot appeared again on the rise she had a strong lead, which she easily maintained to the finish, winning by about sight lengths. Lady Wildsir came in next to her, but being disqualified for going inside the post, Who'd-a-thought-it was placed second, and Wonder third.

Third Race.—The Aldermen's Purse of 40 sovereigns, with a sweep of 2 sovereigns, for all two and three years old 8; one-and-a-half mile; one event; second horse to receive the sweeps. Two years to carry? st.; three years old 8 st., and no allowance; horses 3 lbs. extra.

Bowman's Maritana, 2 years

Bowman's Maritana, 2 years

J. Swan's Olitipa, 3 years

Very much intercet was taken in this race, Satanolla and Maritana being such promising young cracks. The former had the call, and a good deal of money was offered en her at slight odds. Maritana did not take for condition gupporters, and, as it was an undoubted certainty they would all run on their merits, a splendid race was anticipated. Immediately after the start Olitips won away with a dashing lead. Satanella next, and Maritana being undergraph of the course for some time afterwards. At the shaling lead, Satanella next, and Maritana being was a cess ownsawy for the mare; Gremmore made a good effort for it, but without avail.

Fourth Race.—The Forced Handicap of 2 sovereigns each, with 20 sovereigns added; for all winners—optional for the winners of the Hack Race and Hurry Scurry. One event, one mile and a half. The winner to pay 5 sovereigns to the funds. Any besten horses during the meeting may enter on payment of one guines.

In our last issue Lauristina was erroneously placed third for the Maiden Plate. Miss Purston ran third.

THE IRREPRESEILE YANKEE.—The Washington Stor of the 29th July says, with respect to the visitors to the court where the persons charged with the murder of President Lincoln were being tried:—"There is a very large attendance of ladies this morning, the fair weather having the effect of bringing them out. The relic hunters, as well as the artists for pictorial papers, have found their way into the court-reom, and in default of any more available objects to carry away, they on Saturday appropriated some spools of the court-room red tape, which was quickly divided into short lengths and distributed pro reta. The chairs, tables, &c., also begin to suffer, and it is probable that unless an Argus-eyed watch is kept upon the furniture, the court will see it diminish visibly each day, and vanish altogether by the close of the trial. From the ager glances bestowed by some of the lady visitors upon the hair of the prisoners, it is evident that they have a hankering for relics in that quarter; and as there is a rush each day to the prisoners' dock, as they come out and go in, it would not at any time surprise us to see some lady curiosity-hunter clipping away at the hair of Payne, Harold, or some other of the long-haired prisoners as they pass."

(Frem the Saturday Review, August 26.)
The are few more curious and important questions in Constitutions making than that of Senates and Upper Chambers. What is grandly called the Bicameral system, what our forefathers in the days of Cremwell more simply called "the Other House," is so usually taken for granted by the framers of constitutions that we are apt to forget that it arose simply through one of the bappy accidents of our own political history. The normal type of the medieval Parliaments, such as we see it in the French States-General, consisted of three bodies—Nobles, Clergy, and Commons. In Prance, and in most other countries, the Commons or Tiers-Etat—a name curiously reminding us, in an opposite direction, of "the Other House"—consisted simply of the citizens, the non-noble class in the country at large being either actual serfs or at any rate not thought worthy of political rights. A better state of things in Sweeden produced that fourfold division of Chambers which still exists, and which, for modern purposes, is found so the single Tiers-Etat of France, Sweden possesse the two distinct Houses of Citizens and Peasants. A still better state of things in England, helped, as we have just said, by one or two happy accidents, gave we have just said, by one or two happy accidents, gave we have just said, by one or two happy accidents, gave and the consistency of the large noble class scattered throughout the kingdom. The patrician Chamber in Sweden consists of the large noble class scattered throughout the kingdom. The patrician Chamber in Sweden consists of the heads—or, by deputation from them, of some other members—of each of the vast number of noble families with which Sweden is still eaten up. We need not repeat that England has no real mobility—that with us, in a so-called noble family, the head alone is really noble, and that the great problems of our constitutional history. The exact relation of the clergy to our early Parliaments is another mass of those who answer most nearly to the nobles of the other went to the mater for the time comp of that bishoptic or abbey. Practically, a spiritual Barony comes to a nomination peerage, but the legal theory and historical origin of the two things are quite diferent.

Our Bicameral system, then, like almost everything else in England, grew up gradually, almost fortuitously if we will, and it has worked all the better for having grown up thus gradually and fortuitously. It is really wenderful how well the two Houses have pulled together for six hundred years, and how seldem it has occurred to any Englishman to wish to get rid of either the one or the other. Once, indeed, the Rump voted that the House of Lords was useless and dangerous; but the Other House soon came in again under the Lord Protector. The Houses have gradually changed places as regards their respective importance; the Commons have become the really ruling legislative and political body, while the Lords have sunk into a body for revising, correcting, ferbidding, and for originating measures which are not held to be of political importance. The two Houses have become exactly what the Cromwellian phrase imports. The Commons are The House; the Lords are only the Other House. It is these peculiar functions of the House of Lords which the makers of constitutions wish to confer on their own Senates or Other Houses of any kind. The Lords have with us a peculiar checking and delaying function, which is undoubtedly useful, and which can be got only under a system of Two Chambers. It is manifest that it is not to be had where there is one Chamber as with us. A system of three or four. Chambers is a mere system of cetates; there is no body which represents the whole nation; each House represents its own class only, and expresses only the wishes, feelings, and grievances of that class. In Sweden it is assumed that the agreement of three orders out of four will pretty well express the wishes of the nation, and a micesure which passes any three of the four Houses accordingly becomes law. But this is an awkward peculiar insular character, and if the English clergy had not avoided, rather than sought, the position of a political estate of the realm.

Now the question with almost all constitution-makers is where to find a body to execute the peculiar functions into which the once mailed Baronage of England have thus so eddly settled down. They cannot transplant the House of Lords bodily. No one in England would think of creating the House of Lords in its present form, if it did not exist ready made. The virtue of the thing is that it is immernorial. As an hereditary Peerage has existed so long, new members can always be added to it; but an hereditary Peerage called suddenly out of the ground would have no virtue in it at all; it would simply be laughed at. In a British colony of an American State the raw material of the thing does not exist. In most Continental kingdoms there is an available material in the actual mobility, but this is seldom a material which premises very much. Most nations then, at least since 1820, who have had any constitution-making to do, have tried to make some body which should discharge the functions of the British House of Lords, and they have generally been sore put to it to find how to make it. The truth is that, in their circumstances, while The House is a reality, a true representation of the nation, The Other House is a mere ingenious political device, which has little stability in itself, and which lacks the sanctity that antiquity throws over the British House of Lords. We except the Federal States, where the Bicameral system is perfectly natural, where each of its Chambers representation of the nation, The Other House is a mere ingenious political device, which has little stability in itself, and which lacks the sanctity that antiquity throws over the British House of Lords. We except the Federal States, where the Bicameral of the condemnate miner switzerland nor America could do without its Senate or Standards. may be safely affirmed that every means has been taken two before our arrival, and I am afraid that a few persons were killed and wounded. The story told me was as follows:—A professor, objectionable from some cause to the ins, was removed, much to the diagnat of his scholars, who decided to serenade him. The outs supported the scholars; and, should have a parently of and interfered, and would not allow the poetry and guitars. This filled the streets with a mass of people bent on seeing the fun; but the civil guard were firm, and posted their main body around the fountain in the centre of the Puerta del Sol. Other detached companies were placed at the ends of the several streets leading into the Puerta del Sol. Those ordered the people to keep back. Whether some did not hear or rough and the square were fired upon, and some religious and wounded. The military were not called out, and were, therefore, completely guiltless of the bloodshed, which, little as it was, was all too much. The outs shrugged their shoulders, and hinted a revolution; the ins said they were prepared to preserve the peace. But the peace was not broken; and no more shooting is recorded. Easter Sunday being a regular wet day, Madrid did not go out of doors, and he made the sport with it, but no revolutionary performance came off.

Here is what a lady says about Madrid in 1679:—"The city is not enclosed either with a wall of dilow the national sport. The Monday arrived, and the sport with it, but no revolutionary performance came off.

Here is what a lady says about Madrid in 1679:—"The city is not enclosed either with a wall or ditch; the gates, as one may say, are only made fast with a latch—those which I have already seen are all broken; there is not seen any place of defence." And touching did not go ditch; the gates, as one may say, are only made fast with a latch—those which was hung with pictures instead of tapestry, and set round with cushions. Cloth was laid there upon a table for the men, but upon a carpet on the floor for Dona Teresa, myself and the say of the professor of the same for

ELEMBANT SHOOTING IN ADVSSIMA.—A French gentleman with English blood in his veins, Count de Moynier, who describes himself as the grandson of General William Burn, the "Hero of Delhi," has formed a company of adventurous spirits who are about to proceed to Abyssimia for the purpose of forming trading stations at Halai, near Port Adulis, in the Red Sea, and Mount Taranta, in order to collect ivory and other valuable products, which will be remitted to French merchants in that quarter of the world, in relation with whom the expedition is planned. As Count de Moynier and his friends go out well armed for their own safety, and will maintain a sort of military organisation amongst themselves, and elephants and other noble game abound in the neighbourhood of the proposed settlement, a sporting element has been added to the commercial one, and it is announced that any gentleman who would like six months' sporting of the kind referred to may secure tent and mess accommodation, everything in short that he requires, arms and ammunition excepted, and companionship and protection, by making a previous arrangement with the directors of the expedition, which will start in June next year. The departure of the sportsman is, however, set down for October. Count de Moynier takes eare to inform the public that the climate of Mount Taranta is temperate and healthy, and that it is not within the territories of King Theodore, who puts Europeans in irons. If any one desires to collect his own ivory, there is a chance open to him.—

THOSE who remember the active discussion of the composition and functions of the Legislative Council, when the manufacture of Constitutions Council, when the manufacture of Constitutions seemed to be the great business of the colony, will mark the contrast in the present feeling respecting it. We have all kinds of Legislative Councils in the different colonies, and they are revealing day by day their peculiar tendencies, and the forces which reside in their special elements. No one processing the smaller and the forces which reside in their special elements. No one possessing the smallest pretension to intellect or experience would, after what has been seen, desire the existence of one elective Chamber as the sole deliberative body in the State. Of course, according as legislation takes the desired direction in the Assembly, there is a tendency to exalt its powers: but a moment's reflection will lead all prudent men to conclude that no temporary advantage or momentary triumph could com-pensate for the existence of a monster which had nothing above it, but, armed had nothing above it, but, armed with frightful force and influenced by uncertain passions, could make the public interest its prey. The experience of the whole world has proved how dangerous such a body is to all that is dear to man; and even States the most democratic in their tendencies, if once the fatal illusion is permitted a momentary trial, have returned with eagerness into the old paths, and accepted the experience of mankind that nothing can be safe which is absolute—that nothing can be trusted which is without control—that no reason is sufficiently free from aberration—that no independence is so above the sordid passions to make it safe to trust men to do whatever may be suggested among themselves or can be carried out by them

The constitution of the Upper House in this colony has passed through several phases—its first term being an appointment for five years—the same as the duration of the Assembly. the first period must be known to our readers. The last scene in the chapter of their existence will make a lively and impressive one in the history of this country. They were, on the whole, a body of men who had long served under the Crown, and whose political character and legislative experience gave great weight to their epinions. The Minister, resolute to carry a particular measure, invoked the power of the GOVERNOR to swamp that House with twenty-two ephemeral crea-tions. They floated for a moment upon the turbid waters which produced them, and then for the most part disappeared for ever. We believe that the lesson of that time was not lost upon any who witnessed or received it. It was felt that no function could be honourable if deprived of its own normal character; that to deliberate without deliberation—to choose without choice—to make laws without being permitted to look at them—would be a more dishonourable look at them—would be a more dishonourable position than to endure a Government without law—just as the mocking of right is more mischievous than the perpetration of bare and transient wrong. But the evil was not without its advantages. We have no doubt that it produced in all who witnessed it a thorough resolve that it should never reappear. Men who have been chosen since, therefore, have been selected not only with a view to the life long exercise of their functions, but with a moral guarantee that their deliberative rights should never be infringed by any act of the Executive

It is seen how rapid are the changes which take place in such a House, small as is its number. An appointment for life is not in reality an appointment for more than a few years. Either the age of those who receive the appointment, or the changeable circumstances in which they are placed, or their retirement from the country, or some other cause, often opens the door to such as may be fit to take part in the deliberations of this important body. As the nomination must be made by the GOVERNOR with the advice of his Executive Council, there is with the advice of his Executive Council, there is in the appointment if not an absolute election by the people, yet probably what in this instance is far better. The men chosen must have a certain standing at least with those by whom they are appointed, and the GOVERNOR, although having no absolute choice, cannot be compelled to appoint unless in harmony with his own covictions. We believe that Sir Jонх Young has on more than one occasion asserted that right with which he is peculiarly vested by his office, and which indeed is a trust confided to him by his Soveneeds. It is his peculiar duty to watch the composition of the Upper House, and to guard against everything that would deteriorate its standing or destroy its influence. It is clear that its weight with the any whose appointment can be defended upon public grounds and who possess the necessary qualifications; but it is his duty to maintain his constitutional weight in all such decisions, and especially to veto all nominations made which in his view would impair the dignity and distinction of the service. Not only so; it is the especial duty of the GOVERNOR to take care in the appointment of a PRESIDENT that the appointment of a Prestingent that the selection is such as will do honour to his choice. In this he has a power more direct and a discretion more absolute. Perhaps it is the only office which on political grounds is confided to his special care. He has a right to remove, as well as to care. He has a right to remove, as well as to appoint and to remove, without any other con-sultation with his Ministers than such as is due in courtesy to men in such positions. But in fulfilling this task he cannot be discharged from responsibility by the urgency of the advice he may receive or the strength of the influence which may be attempted over his judgment. If the hour ever arrives when it is necessary for the honour of the Legislative Council, and for the maintenance of its place in the confidence of the country, to of its place in the confidence of the country, to cancel an appointment, ought he not to feel that it is precisely here that his duty is sacred as exceptional;—that it is for this very purpose he holds the balance;—that it is in discharge of this trust he is specially responsible to the Crown. To appoint a man, or to retain one, where the same character is improveded without whose character is impeached, without seeing that the exculpation is direct and perfect, would be, no doubt, the easiest course, and might avoid the trouble and pain of a duty from which all men naturally shrink; but it would be a fatal error, and might, in proportion to the aggravation of the circumstances be a great crime. The meading circumstances, be a great crime. The guardian of the Upper House, in the most eminent sense is the Governor of the country. When its status is degraded or its influence destroyed, there is nothing which can effectually check popular encroachment or hinder the adoption of pernicious and vindictive laws. Whether the present structure of the Upper House be the most desirable or not, the conclusions of the people will be largely dependent upon its character. The peril of an elective Legislative Council is that unless the qualifications are very high both of the voters and the elected, we should obtain but a duplicate of the Assembly;—men whose existence in public life would be rather tolerated than desired, and who, taken for all in all, would be, to use the estimate of Mr. WENTWORTH," bet to use the estimate of Mr. Wentworth, "a bad copy of a detestable original." It is only as selections to this office are made of men worthy of public esteem, that this result can be secured. Take away this, and bad as the secured. I are away this, and bad as the choice which would be made at the polling booth, it might, at least, have the excuse of its origin, and would reflect no disgrace save upon those by whom it was made.

THE murrain among cattle in England seems to THE murrain among cattle in England seems to be even more destructive than pleuro-pneumonia has been with us, and it is quite as puzzling to all the learned doctors who undertake to prescribe for the ailments of cattle. The theory that it is caused by the sudden change from dry to succulent food, consequent on heavy rains after a long drought, does not seem very tenable on this side of the world, because such violent changes are constant in because such violent changes are constant in Australian experience. Our native grasses in the heat of summer are quite as dry as hay, and the growth of the young green grass, after rain, is far more rapid than in England. Our rain, is far more rapid than in England. Our stock, too, is often in the worst possible condition to stand the change, because not being stall-fed they are often underfed, and at the breaking-up of a drought are in a half-starved, weakly condition, little fitting them for any trial to their constitution. They not unfrequently get blown in consequence of a rapid change to a plentiful and moist diet, but we do not know of any occasion on which anything like the English murrain—a clearly infectious disease—can be traced to such a cause. The disease—can be traced to such a cause. The English cattle, more tenderly cared for, may be less hardy and less able to resist the access of disease than our herds, which have to shift for themselves, and which are accustomed to very great and very rapid variations of climate.

Whatever may be the cause of the murrain in England—whether imported from Russia, or generated in the country from climatic variations or close penning in ships or railway trucks — it evidently extends beyond the circle of its primary causation. The disease flies about from place to place, and attacks cattle that have been in a way are and at the best leading to the control of the c that have been in no way expe ed to the alleged causes of the disease—that have not been in communication with imported stock—that have not been travelling by land or sea, and that have not been exposed to any change of food.

The effect of the murrain has, of course, been

The effect of the murrain has, of course, been to increase the price of meat, and thereby to aggravate causes that had been already operating in that direction. The price had been steadily rising for some time in consequence of the increased demand, and the drought, by retarding the usual fattening process, had still further diminished the available supply. The murrain has aggravated the scarcity to a still greater pitch, and it made it more difficult

The murrain has aggravated the scarcity to a still greater pitch, and it made it more difficult than ever for the poorer classes to provide themselves with a meat diet.

The disease is not altogether without its effect upon Australian affairs. The deaths in the dairies have raised the price of milk, and the scarcity and increase in the price of milk has diminished the quantity available for cheese. The production of cheese has therefore diminished, and the price has risen, and in consequence of this the export has fallen off. Our local farmers, therefore, have snatched a bit of protection, and are less exposed than before to the competition of the "foreigner." So again with bacon. The high price of beef in England has caused a greater demand for bacon, and the export of it has been checked. In default of our ordinary import the price of colonial bacon has risen. It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good, and if our farmers can manage to make a good use of the temporary monopoly placed at their disposal, and improve, the quality of their wares, they may be able to monopoly placed at their disposal, and improve the quality of their wares, they may be able to establish a permanent preference for the colonial article. At any rate they have an unexpected opportunity to stimulate them to do their best. Hitherto the quality of the colonial article has been considered inferior, though without any sufficient reason why it should be so. The quality might surely be improved, and a higher price and larger profits will give every encouragement to attempt improvement.

The murrain will still more powerfully affect Australian interests if it tends to precipitate the development and improvement of processes for preserving meat without the necessity of salting country must be as the weight of the individuals who compose it; and if men without any fitness, or property, or education, or past services are constituted councillors, a serious damage is done to the reputation of the whole body; and against this it is the duty of the Governor to watch. He may not have a right to dictate who shall be appointed, and he may have no fair claim to refuse any whose appointment can be defended upon public grounds and who possess the necessary of consumers. It is the interest of the mother country, therefore, quite as much as the interest of Australia, that the process of preserving meat fresh, so as to enable it to stand a long voyage, should be perfected. When a great necessity arises, the necessity is generally met. The murrain will direct special attention to the matter, and the English people will see that if they cannot rely upon a sufficient supply of sound cattle, the next best thing will be to have a plentiful supply of wholesome pre-erved meat sound cattle, the next best thing will be to have a plentiful supply of wholesome preserved meat from those countries where live stock roam over the land in superabundance, and where fat beasts are boiled down for tallow in default of any better use to which to put them.

Mr. Morr has recently invited our attention to the success which has attended the efforts of Mr. BLAXLAND to preserve meat fresh. We are glad to hear on such good authority that a colonial enterprise is promising such satisfactory results. Two other patented methods have been for some time before the public. Mr. SQUAREY, of Adelaide, has patented one English method of Adelaide, has patented one English method, and a gentleman at Newcastle has secured the local patent for Dr. MORGAN's method of infiltration. We do not pretend to adjudicate between the respective merits of these different methods. Time and experience will settle that question. The palm will be ultimately awarded to that plan which, with course course comments of the course course of the be ultimately awarded to that plan which, with equal economy, furnishes the most nutritive and palatable article, and admits of preservation for the longest period without deterioration. The various processes may perhaps be found on trial to have different degrees of merit in different directions. One process may preserve for the longest time, another in the best form, and they may therefore each be found useful for different purposes and different markets. The competition between them cannot be otherwise than beneficial. They may be all improved wise than beneficial. They may be all improved by practice; they may even all be superseded by something better still. At the present moment meat with ourselver

At the present moment meat with ourselves is so scarce and dear, owing to a proloaged drought in the interior, that we have enough to do to provide our own cities without thinking of exporting. But that is a mere temporary phenomenon. With the breaking-up of the househt stock will be able to travel, and if a drought, stock will be able to travel, and if a steady demand for fat cattle sets in, the supply can soon be made to fetch up. If the opening for trade is established we shall be able to fill it.

THE SPEAKERSHIP.— The rumour of Mr. Hay's intended resignation of the Speakership, abortly after the opening of Parliament, has been confirmed. It is stated that Mr. William Forster will be proposed as Mr. Hay's successor in the Chair of the Assembly.

"Tom Doillar."—It has been ascortained that Tem Dollar, one of the seemen who escaped from the Carapea on Monday night, stole a boat the poperty of the Impetal Government from Garden Island on the following morning. He went to Middle Harbour, where he obtained water and provisions, and then put out to sae. There was trang-southerly wind blowing at the time; and he most, therefore, have gone northwards. Dollar may have been picked up by some wassed along the coast; but, should that not have happened, he will no doubt be apprehended on going into any of the northern ports.

STARET ACCIDENTE.—Shortly before 12 o'clock on Priday night a man named Cox was found lying in the readway of Parramatita-street, one of his thighs being brokes. The unfortunateman, who, as it is said, was not sober, wasunable to explain how he became injured; but it is supposed that he either staggered against an omnibus and being knocked down, was thus hurt, or that the whoel of some which passed over his leg as he lay helpleasly drunk. Cox is a hawker of fish; he lives in Charles-street, and he was found nearly opposite to the entrance of that thoroughfare. He was taken by the police to the Infirmary. An socident happened on Friday evening to a man named Thomas Hornly, a contractor. He was driving a horse into a paddeck at Petersham when he had the mifertune to fall from the horse on which he was riding. The poor man was readed unconscious, and remained so until Saturday morning. It is understood that the principal injury he suffered was fracture of the jaw.—A by pasmed John Fitzsarlok was droving in the victority, now an injury to one of his legs. Brocktive Munden of A Chilvaman—Wednessley's Breisteed Disputch asps:—To-deay we are called upon to record the perpetration of another of those horrible murches when he are no numerous in the criminal annals of the colony. On Saturday afternoon last Mr. Sammer carte was proceeding to Mudmelong, and had reached the hill on this side of that place, some time between 5 and 6 o'deel, when he espied a man lying across the road. On approaching nearer to him he noticed that his hat was on ife, and supposing that it was some fellow who had been inabilities too freely, and who had fallen down while in the sot of highing his pips, and thus set himself on fire, he gut down from the cart to see who he was, and to high him set of the wadding which had accompanied the short that had entered the poor fellow's head. On examining his face he found that the deceased was a Chinaman. The body was lying close to a tree, and it is not impossible that the murdeer concealed himself behind it until his victim approached sufficiently near to enable him, with cases, to fulfil his murderous intention. The carter at once returned to the police station and gave information, and the body was removed, and a peer meries examination held upon it on Monday by Dr. Pattison, as well as a magniterial inquiry instituted into the circumstances by the police magie rate, Mr. T. L. Crommedin. Dr. Pattison, on examining the sacily, found five wounds, two of which penterated has brain. On removing the scalp he discovered three wounds on the cranium, two of these communicating with the brain. On removing the skull cap he found the duramater pierced, and a considerable amount of brain matter portriding.—On cutting away the hair he traced a canal from the company of the company

Istrover Berens.—Mr. L. M'Bean, who has given considerable attention to the improvement of the broad of his facks, arrived in Melbourne by the Great Britain, bringing with him two ewes and two reams selected from the Ramboullet flocks of the Emperor of France. It is always gratifying to hear of these arrivals, as fresh and improved blood must tend to greatly improve the present breed, and add to the wealth of the country. Mr. M'Bean, we bears, finds little difficulty in disposing of his rams at good prices.—Firsteral Times.

Attractive Bares. Time CLIPRIT Shot DEAD.—The Pastoral Times of 13th instant ways:—From a gentleman who passed through Echuca on Thursday we learn the fellowing particulars of a case of killing near town. It appears that a man named O Brien resided with his wife on the Gampaspe, about five miles from Echuca, and on Wednesday, as he was crossing the river to go and fetch his herse, he observed a man approaching his hut. He found his berss, and en returning heard a scream but did not take notice of it; a second and londer scream then reached him, and this was followed by a third, rather faint. Suspecting the screams were from his wife, he dashed into the river, swam across, and ran home. When within twenty or thirty yards of his hut a man, who up till then had been struggling with O'Brien's wife, botted, and O'Brien asked his wife what it all meant. Mrs. O'Brien did not, at first reply, seeming almost misenable, but at length she said the man had almost murdered her. O'Brien did not, at first reply, seeming almost insenable, but at length she said the man had almost murdered ber. Berious Storm.—Last Sunday was disagreeably close and sultry, while during the day the wind was high and loisteous, coming at one moment in a strong half-tornado, and snother in a gentle breeze. The sky was cloudy and promised rain, which fell in small quantities, barely sufficient to allay the dust. The wind veered about occasionally, but it chiefly prevailed from the north, bringing with it hot unhashlity blasts, as though they came from an oven half-heated. At sundown there was every appearance of an approach of heavy rain. About half-past 5 p.m. a tremendous gust of wind followed vivid flashes of lightning, with thunder that sunded like the discharge of a battery of artillery. The wind came from the north-west, and blew down trees and tore off the roofs of houses in North and South Deniliquin. At Roberta's hotel it liew in bodily a large window frame, the glass, and the accompanimenta, and it destroyed a locking-glass of value. One of the windows of the Catholic chapel was blown in. Messrs. Rosenfield, the well-known drapers, had their sign blown into stoms. A cottage with a zinc roof lad some of the zinc sheet blown twenty or thirty yards from the building. On the north side of the river the storm bents with great violence on the old Wandseer Inn, partially surroding a stable; a spring-waggon was completely turned upside down, and some valuables broken in the botel. At Haxall and Heriot's boarding-house, North Deniliquin, the roof was partly carried away, and we have ne doubt that the storm did other damage, information of which has not yet reached us. The most marvellous feature in all of the storms of the session is that we have had little or no rain. Continued high winds and little rain are said to be symptematic of a long drought.—Pastoral Times, Ootober 13th.

half-past 12 on Thursday a signal at the pilot station asnounced that a Geverament steamably was in sight, and the town was at once in a bustle. Soon afterwards the Platypus steamed into the harbour and anchored near the end of all the towns on the passage back to Brishame. But during the call at Rockhampton he accidentally heard that our Lane as his appraiser; but Mr. Rodd would not cencur in the appointment of an unpire, slithough two gentlemen were named, both of whom were unexceptionable. The matter has therefore to be referred to the Minister for Lands, thus entailing on Mr. Flood the whole expense.

THE VALUATIONS.—We learn from the Pistoral Times that the assessments of the runs in South Riverina are now nearly completed, and the Government will reap the benefit of increased rentals to a very large extent. So far as we have been able to judge, the Crown Assessors have done their duty. The Court held at Urans by Mr. J. W. Carne was the first in these districts. The local commissioner, Mr. Lockhart, was in attendance there, and by his invaluable assistance the Crown Assessor was enabled to make the first valuations by which the subsequent Crown Assessors were apparently guided. Of the Assessor, who acted at Denfliquin (Mr. Campbell), we can only say that he appeared to exercise great pains in the important business entrusted to him, and the Crown tenants whose runs he appraised consider that he did justice between them and the Government.

SCARCITY OF PAT CATILE.—The Brishase Courier of 17th instant says:—The possession of a pleantiful supply of cheep beef has long been considered a characteristic of Australia. At the present time Queen land is the only one that possesses this advantage to the usual extent. While the price of fat bullocks remains at £4 to £5 here, it has gone up to £7 or £8 remains at £4 to £5 here, it has gone up to £7 or £8 remains at £4 to £5 here, it has gone up to £7 or £8 remains at £4 to £5 here, it has gone up to £7 or £8 remains at £4 to £5 here, it has gone up to £7 or £8 remains at £4 to £5 here, it has gone up to £7 or £8 remains at £4 to £5 here, it has gone up to £7 or £8 remains at £4 to £5 here, it has gone up to £7 or £8 remains at £4 to £5 here, it has gone up to £7 or £8 remains at £4 to £5 here, it has gone up to £7 or £8 remains at £8 to £8 here, it has gone up to £7 or £8 remains at £8 to £8 here, it has coultern districts, and by the entire dependence on the natural graces of the country for fattening stock. Arrangements are now being carried out for the transport by see of surplus stock from our merhern ports, instead of having recourse to boiling-down operations. Our Southern neighbours will not, for the present at least, get much relief from this source, as the rush to New Zealand gold diggings has made them the most remunerative market for fat stock, best having gone up there to a fabulous price. We fear the supply that can be spared is not large, as all the new country to the northward has been taken up with mixed herds of young cattle, and another year or two must elapse before any great quantity of full grown fat bullocks can be drafted from the herds.

The DOINGS OF THE SHENANDOAH.—The Ballarat Star learn that the whaling barque Mich had arrived at San Francisco in twenty-eight days from the Arctic Coean, with the crows of several whales destroyed by the pirate Shealand and the way of the country

A RUNAWAY CONVICT DROWNED.—Our King George's Sound correspondent (writes the S. A Rovister) says:

"As I reported last month, a convict named Parker, belonging to the Pilot Establishment, seized a boat belonging to that department, and attempted to make his escape; but, as was then observed, owing to the prevalence of westerly gaies he would be compelled to run in the direction of Adelaide. The facts come to light verify this idea, as the boat was picked up at Cape Knob, and it is surmised that the unfortunate convict, while in the boat, was overtaken by a sudden squal, and let fly the sheet, causing the sail to dy over the manthead, and thus capsized the boat. His body has not yet been recovered.

ACCLIMATISATION IN QUEENLAND—Tuesday's Reich

body has not yet been recovered.

ACCLIMATISATION IN QUEENBLAND.—Tuesday's Brishms Courier reports that an ordinary meeting of the Acclimatisation Society took place the previous day, at which some very favourable reports were given by the hon. Secretary. It is gratifying to know that, notwithstanding the many obstacles against which it has had to contend, the society is now established on a firm basis, and that each mail from Europe proves its increased recognition by the British and continental associations. The deer, conserning which so much anxiety was at first expressed, have become completely domesticated and reconciled to their new abode. Other animals are also in a thriving condition. The Colonial Secretary suggested, that as a steamer would leave Brisbane for Java in January next, a favourable opportunity would be efforded of sending horses and stock to that place, and thus establish a system of exchange which would be advantageous to both countries.

SUCCESS AGAINST THE NATIVES. SUCCESS AGAINST THE NATIVES.

/From the Nelson Colonist's own Correspondent /
OUR correspondent, whose earlier letters have only now reached us, gives particulars of what took place prior to date of letters narrating the landing of the forces, the stranding of the Huntress, the repulse of the natives, the firing of Opotiki, and other details, the main features of which have already appeared in our columns. We take up the narrative at the point up to latest dates previously published Opotiki, September 27, 1865.

Captain Percy of the Mounted Force, whe was badly hit on the leg, is now going on well. We have done the Hauhaus a great deal of harm. I am happy to say we have taken cattle, horses, a vast number of pigs, a great quantity of potatoes, several carts and sets of harmess. The rebels sent us in a message, a couple of days back, asking us what we meant by centing here, living on them and destreying their property without the sanction of the Government; they advised us to be off quietly and at once, as they did not wish to kill us. We sent back to say that we had come here to avenge the murders of Volkner and Fulloon, and intended to do it; that it was true we had made free with some of their property, but we intended to have it all; we advised them to send in the white hoads in their possession, and all, except the nurderers, to come in and give themselves up.

SAFE ARRIVAL OF TIWAI'S WIFE.

(Prom the New Zoaland Herald, October 4.)

By the schooner Fortune, Captain Black, which arrived last night from the Heat Coart, we have further new from Opottis, Whakatane, &c.

A native named George and the chief Cape's wife came overland from Whakatane on Monday last to Opotiki, for the purpose of communicating with Major Brassey. Immediately upon arrival, they were placed under arrest. They said that they had come for the purpose of stating that the Whakatane natives were willing to surrender and lay down their arms. Next day they were liberated and sent with a detachment of 120 Forest Rangers, in command of Major Macdonnell, back to Whakatane to see if the report was true. Upon arrival there 150 Whakatanes immediately surrendered and laid down their arms, which were taken back by the force to Major Brassey.

Major Macdonnell informed the natives that the Governor was not desirons to cause war in the Whakatane district; all he wanted was the surrender of Mr. Fulloon's murderers. To this the natives replied that they did not know saything about them, but promised to asset in their captured to Opotiki.

A further detachment of 150 men, with Major Brassey.

turned to Opotiki.

A further detachment of 160 men, with Major Brassey, was to leave Opotiki on Friday last for Whakatane, to fluish the lovers, and take possession of the place.

It was reported that two natives had been arrested on suspicion of being concerned in Mr. Pullon's murder.

The forces at Opotiki had met with every success, completely routing the rebels, and occupying the whole country routing the rebels, and occupying the whole country routing the rebels, and occupying the whole country routing. The Interest of the Major the M

MURDER OF INTERPRETER BROUGHTON.

(From the Wellington Advertiser, October 9.)

In our last issue we mentioned the fact that when the s. 8.

Storm Bird left Wanganui on Thurndry, a report was in circulation to the effect that Mr. C. W. Broughton, who for some time past has acted in the capacity of interpreter to the Imperial forces, had been murdered by the natives. Recent intelligence received by the s.a. Wanganui tends to corroborate these melancholy tidings, and there is little room left for doubt that Mr. Broughton has either been most foully murdered, or he is in the hands of the fanatics. The last intelligence we received was to the effect that Mr. Broughton was missing, and there were many circumstances which led to the belief that he had fallen a victim to the treachery of the natives.

The Wanganui Chronicle of Saturday last has the following with reference to this matter:

"There has been no further intelligence regarding our unfortunate townsman. Attempts have been made at communication with the Maories by means of a white flag, but in vain, and since the news of the Millary Train Corps man being killed, the most sanguine are beginning to fear that the opinion of the natives that Mr. Broughton is murdered may turn out correct. Lieutenant-Colonal Gorton has offered to head a volunteer expedition to ascertain the Irvuit, but Brigadier-General Waddy is so fettered by his instructions that he cannot move in the matter. The natives would also form a party for the same purpose. Would it not be a graceful thing in the Government to put Major Von Tempsky at their head, if he would undertake the duty?"

We have no means of ascertaining what steps the Government intend taking with reference to the supposed murder of Mr. Broughton for heaving with reference to the Wanganui, Waltin, Cotober 5, 1865.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

Since the above was written we have further particulars contained in the following extract from a letter which was received by the s.a. Wanganui, by George Grey, from his wife, who was at Futils:

"Wanganui, Putils, October 7, 1865.

"I have seen all the natives of Putils, George. Two Europeans have been killed at Patea—they were murdered by the Hau-haus. Ruka Hanaru, and his men of the Riskabchi, are the perpetrators of the deed."

It will be seen from the foregoing that one of Broughton's murderers (if this information should be correct) is Ruka Hanaru, the native who Mr. Broughton had known so well at Rangiliki, and whom he had shortly before generously supplied with spirits and tobacco.

Ruha Hanaru, the native who Mr. Broughton had known so well at Rangithis, and whom he had abortly before generously supplied with spirits and tobacco.

THE particulars of the murder of Kereti have already appeared in the Sydney Morming Heroid. Concerning Tariu, the released prisones who accompanied poor Keriti to Weivers, we copy as follows from the Wengensui Chrenicis of 27th ultimo:—'It appears that while Kereti went to see the natives at Waitotars, Tariu went on to Whenurkurs, with a parcel of proclamations. On his stating his errand, a long debate ensued as to what should be done to him for coming for such a purpose. Many were for killing him and burning the proclamation; others wished to take him to Taranaki as a prisoner; but ultimately the influence of some Waitotars chiefs (among whom Hona Hare Tipone, and Pirimona were foremest) prevailed, and it was determined to send him back—proclamations and all. He accordingly returned, but contrived to leave the proclamations behind him. He says that the women and children of the coast tribes have been sent a long way back into the beah for security, and that the mon are told off into small bands to roam about and kill every white man and friendly native they can lay hands on. Private letters from Wangongoro state that in that neighbourhood the proclamation is received by the Maeries with the utmost contempt and ridicule. Tariu says that the mon who murdered Kereti (who died on Sunday) were Himiona of Nakumaru, Hami of Kaipo, and a Taranaki, whose name he does not know."

The General Gevernment Genette, issued on Monday, contains the following proclamation:—

"Whereas, upon the 21st day of September, a native policeman, named Kereti, was barbarously murdered by a party of Hau fanatics, when he was engaged in carrying the Governor's proclamation of peace to the native in arms, and after he had been invi

AUCKIAND.

The Kate, Ceptain Carter, brings Auckland papers to the 7th instant.

The Deily Southern Cross of the 6th says:—Yesterday a letter was received by a gentleman in town from a settler in the Kawhia district, who is well informed as to the movements of the natives in that 'quarter, stating that a great meeting of the Nreatimaniopoto and their allies took place some days ago, at Kawhia. King, Rewi, and other leading rebel chiefs were present, and harangued their followers. The whole of the speeches were of a warilize character, and expressed a determination to attempt the conquest of the Walkato territory at the first favourable opportunity, which the rebel chiefs expect will be afforded on the withdrawal of the troops. The letter states that the meeting was held with the concurrence of Thompson.

MINISTERIAL CRISIS.—The same paper states that the following is the motion moved by Mr. Colenno, in the House of Representatives, on the 27th ultimo, on which the Government were defeated:—"That, in the opinion of this House, it is most desirable that it should be fully informed as to the reseons why certain persons of the Maori race guilty, at various times and in divers places, of this best-barrous nurder of more than twenty English settlers (comprising men, women, and children) were smaller in a proclamation dated the 2nd instant, to be fully pardoned—seeing that such murderors were specially exempted in the proclamation of October 25th, and again in another of December 17th, 1864: that against some of them verdicts of 'Wilfial murder' have been returned by several coroner's juries; and that this House is in possession of no papers nor information which, in its present opinion, could have sanctioned such a proceeding." Shortly after this motion was carried, Mr. Weld gave notice that, on their next meeting, he would move that the vote of the House on the ministry is intention to proceed with any other business until this question was decided, for if the resolution was not rescinded the Ministry would feel it

The Porest Hangers, under the command of Major Von Tempsky and Major Jackson, have notably distinguished themselves. They are a kind of irregular troops not only capable of fighting according to the ordinary standard method, but especially calculated to penetrate the intricacies of a New Zealand bush, and with a revolver and bewis knife beard the savage in his den. It was evidently the policy of a "self-refinint" Government to keep up the esprit de corps of such a body of men as high as possible, and to excite and regulate rather than check their ardour and enthusiasse. But instead of this, the Government endeavoured to break faith with the men a short time ago, by attempting to reduce their pay below the amount mutually agreed upon when the men entered the corps. This coused immense dissatisfaction; it spread distrust in the ranks and damped the zeal of the men.

The Forest Rangers are passionately devoted to their chief, Major Von Tempsky. He is a man after their own heart. He is ever ready to face the greatest danger, ever found in the thickest of the fight, full of discretion as of zeal, fertile in expedient, quick in decision, an accomplished scholar, and a gantieman. There is, therefore, no wonder that Major Von Tempsky's men feel bound by the strongest ties to him, and are ready to follow him wherever he may choose to lead. Is fact he is the hero, and his band of Rangers are here worshippers.

A young officer lately arrived from England, with letters of introduction to some of the happy family which forms the Government, has been rapidly promoted from rank to rank, if if the young gentleman, after acither lengthesed not distinguished service, found himself one and the same day, first a Major, and then a Lieutenant-Colonel, and so placed over the able and experienced Major Von Tempsky. The latter was ordered to put himself under the command of the former. He replied by sending in his resignation. This was refused, and again sont in, and again declined. A fair amount of business has come under our notice in the import markets to-day, and though no speculative transactions are reported, yet a feeling of this description is being evineed towards breadstuffs. In the early part of the day there were sellers at £23 for best Adelaide flour, but towards the close nothing could be purchased under £23 los. At the former figure, about a hundred tons changed hands in one line. For country brands £23 los has been obtained. Chillan flour has been placed at £21 los. It is stated that a thousand barrels of the American flour recently placed to land ex Victoria have been resold at a £20 los. The election excitement of to-day has fairly put a stop to business, and we have no transactions to report. The Storm Bird from Launceston brings a large cargo of wheat, the arrival of which will, no doubt, affect our markets to some extent. At present, however, we can only repeat our price list, as follows:—Flour, £30 per ton; wheat, 50 per bushel; brant, 164 ditto; £30 per ton; wheat, 50 per bushel; brant, 164 ditto; £40 per ton; wheat, 50 as da per bushel; maine, 50 de per bushel; barley (English), 50 to 50 de per ditto; hay (pressed), £4 tos to £5 per ton; pointons, £5 10s to £6 per ton, haps in; these, as to 11 dopr 1b; butter (potted), is at do 1s de per lb.

The following is from the Launceston Examiner of the 17th instant:—

The Season at Young.—The weather on Sunday was preternaturally warm and oppressive, and there were sense slight indication of rain, but the clouds passed off, and a het wind commenced blowing, which raised the temperature to the delightful point of 98 in the shade. What it night have been in the sun we had not the courage to test. It was wretchedly uncomfortable, but it was nothing to the miseries which were in store for us on the succeeding day. The first thing in the morning the wind rese, and slew a very hurricane of brickfielders the whole day through. From all points of the compass clouds of dust swoot and eddied through the town. Into the passages, under the doors, down through the shingles, up through the flooring boards, and through overy crack, crevice, and keyhole the hateful penetrating dust found its way. It was impossible to keep it out of the houses. Everything was covered and smothered with it, and the drapper display of fundamental spring linery was terribly peppered and damaged by it. At night the wind fell, and the following morning the sky locked cloudy and threatening, but the appearances were examined to the single of the country.—Burresspong drayse.

HICHENS GEDYE has received instructions from the proprietor to sell by public auction, on WEDNESDAY, the 1st November naxt. All those nine acres of land at Five Bock, securely fenced, three acres whereof are trenched and planted with choice fruit-trees, including sixty orange-trees; the whole of the residue being under crop, with about 5000 strawberry-planta, loaded with the finest fruit. Also a great variety of vegetables, together with a dairy, stable, harness, outhouses and appurtenances, and a never-failing well of water in the driest seasons.

This is a most desirable property, about six miles from Sydney, on the Parramatta Road, and four miles on the new Kissing Point Road, and has been in the possession of the present proprietor for the last ten years, during which period it has been assidinously cultivated. The fences are wreathed with never-faded shamrocks and red and white roses—cmblems of Old England—with indigenous evergreens, alternately blooming. There it can truly be said you can participate in the fruit of the vine and the melon, and drink of the milk of its nectar.

This City of Adelaide, steamer, brings Melbourne papers to the 19th instant.

The Argus of that date says.—Though the civil servants have been paid their arrears of salary by means of the cash need with the London Chartered Bank, and some of the goablic bodies receiving Government aid have obtained payment on account of the grant for 1866, others have not been so fortunate. Amongst those in the latter category is the Board of Agriculture, the secretary of which recently applied to the head of the Government to accertain when the grant for the year would be paid. In reply, the Chief Secretary simply sent the following very curt communication.—"The Appropriation Bill has not been passed by the Legislative Council.—J. M.C."

The Catelinemise Daily Neura says.—"A Chinaman who has expressed his intention of proceeding home to the Flowery Land at no distant period, and who during his stay in this colony has been a most successful and persevering miner, has formed a collection of nuggets which he intends to convey intact to his native country. The actual value of the gold would probably be about £300, but the beauty of some of the specimens would perhaps raise the market price. In several instances, where the gold in its original condition has slightly resembled various natural objects, the effect has been aided by most ingenious artificial contrivances. Far example, a small nugget bore a strong likeness to a Chinaman's head; by the rough addition of ears and tail the resemblance became perfect. John intends remaining in Victoria until the abolition of the sarround of fitting and those who are in the habit of living comfortably and "aring agresser amount of fitting comfortably and "aring agresser amount of fitting comfortably and "aring sumptuously every day." About a fortuight ago, an aged and emaciated-looking female, well known in this township, and who has lived a most wretched and miserable life for some years past, determined to venture the journey back again to the Ovens. Between the Twelve and Righteen Mile Cr nearly nine years on M'Callum's Creek, informs us that, on Sundsy, he found some hundreds of black fish lying dead on the dry ground in the immediate neighbourhood of the creek. His currosity being aroused, he watched the water, and saw hundreds of fish lying upon their backs, with their mouths epen, struggling to reach the banks of the creek. Those who succeeded in arriving there sprung out of the water on to the dry ground, and when interfered with exhibited the strongest possible reluctance to the water, preferring to lie on dry ground and die there. His first suspicion was that the water had been tained with abecquashing higher up the creek; but this could not be the case, as he remembered when sheep were being washed in the creek last year the fish were then healthy and vigorous, and moreover, the water this year is quite fit for drinking purposes. The most probable hypothesis is that an epidemic of some kind has broken out amongest the fish, probably polluting the water so far as the finny tribe is concerned; and this hypothesis gains force from the fact that, according to all account, the fish in the Murray are at the present time exhibiting a similar desire to leave their natural element to die on terra frima."

A correspondent, writing from St. Leonarde, Indented

Seatures, in fact, contrasted strongly with the horror-strickes faces of those who listened to him. It is worthy of mention that, beyond the pain consequent upon such rude essays at amputation, no ill efforts have followed the bite.

The Desiperford Mercury learns that the local apjarists are suffering under a severe infliction—numbers of hives having come to grief, while to all appearance the little industrial republics were going on most favourably, and, without fear of dead-locks, crises, or customs actions, were getting their cells in readiness for the summer collection. The naturalist may be able, by a little research, to give a cause for the effect referred to; and, as the produce of honey is one of some importance, we trust to hear something as a palliative or preventive for the future.

ANN THISTLES RIALLY A NULANCE —Strange to say (ebserves the Geelong Advertiser), there is a controversy new arising as to this point, which was understood to have been definitely settled long ago. The Hamilton Spectator remarks — "The windom of our Legislature is that they are so much worse than a mere nuisance, that it is necessary to inflict a penalty on the man who suffers them to grow on his ground, and to carry out this law numbers of thistle inspectors pervade the land, and many an unhappy wight has to make his bow before their warehips for allowing the companion of the shamock and the rose to bloom upon his land. But, spite of this, some are so patriotic, or so fond, or so something, that even the prescribed penalty off-repeated will not induce them to cut down the revered weed. It is well-known that one squater last year said he would rather be fined as often as they could fine him than cut the thirtles. And he stuck to his text too, as can be seen by a ride over his downy hills. But it is now asserted that the thistles are not a nuisance, that they are necessary in grazing grounds as furnishing food for sheep and cattle, at a time when the natural grass is dried up." On this point we will quote Mr. Knight—no mea hills. But it is now asserted that the thistles are not a nuisance, that they are necessary in graxing grounds as furnishing food for sheep and cattle, at a time when the natural grass is dried up." On this point we will quote Mr. Knight—no mean authority. He, as a member of the Belfast Shire Council, in opposing the appeintment of inspectors, said.—" It had been proved that the eradication of the thistle was impossible; for the last ten years it had been tried and proved a failure. Gentlemen would be surprised to hear it, but thistles were really useful; sheep and cattle ate them greedily, and they formed good pasture when other kinds of food were source. But cutting thistles is like the seven-headed hydrs, they only grow the stronger, whereas when the sheep eat off the buttons the plants died out. On one part of his run, which a few years ago was overrun, there was not now one to be seen. Depend upon it the thistle was a valuable institution. The president would tell him that it would be illegal not to destroy thistles; but he contended that they could simply gnore the act by not appeinting inspectors."

THE TURY—There was a strong muster of members at the Victorian Subscription Room last evening, and a good deal of business was done. Rose of Demmark was made decidedly first favourie for the Melbourne Cup—100 to 12 being the last price, 10 to 1 having been taken freely and wanted, insomuch that an offer to take 1000 to 100 met with no response. The Poet was backed at 100 to 9, and 10 to 1 was the best price next to be had. Minatrel was also in favour, 100 to 8 being the longest odds tendered, but these were declined. Riverian was backed for a little money at 26 to 1; the same price was taken about Charles Albert early in the evening, but at the close 1000 to 40 was laid against the coll, and 300 to 10 each offered against Charles Albert and Victoria, in the same stable. Between Minstrel and Charles Albert here was some sross betting, 200 to 100 pp. having been laid on the Tasmanian brose; 600 to 10 was taken

THE LEICHHARDT SEARCH EXPEDITION.

Nocaliji River, Paroo, 16th September, 1865.

To the Secretary of the Ladies' Leichhardt Search Committee.

Madam,—I have the honour to request that you will lay the following minutes of the proceedings of the Leichhardt Search Expedition before the committee. Commencing at the final date of my last despatch, 9th August, 1866, they carry on events to the 23rd Angust, completing the account of what may be considered the first stage of our journey. I have advisedly refrained from dwelling upon many interesting and important topics, fully noticed in my journal, sonfining myself to a simple record of travel and incident with a view to furnish a clear and connected account of our progress.

16th to 16th August, 1865.—As mentioned in my former resistence our horses were now in a wretched condition. If the control of the many control of the continued, "That the decaded, Josiah Tear, was helided by a single record of the continued," That the decaded, Josiah Tear, was helided by a friends and makes, and is highly connected in Lamcaston. good feed fortune had reserved for us in the vicinity of our camp. On the 13th instant I received a few lines frem Mr. M'Intyre, directing me to bring on certain portions of the stores lying at Menindie, and the following day we spent in conveying them to our camp, seven miles, and making pregaration for starting.

15th August.—Travelled about eighteen miles along the river. Passed Albemarle station about noon, and camped towards evening on a well grassed bend.

16th August.—Travelled about twenty miles along the river, camped on a scantily grassed bend. The country looked miserably dry all along the river, and the scarcity of grass, saltbush, and every kind of herbage was really alaming. No wonder every green thing had been eaten down to the roots. Vast numbers of sheep and cattle have been grazing along the river for eighteen months, during which period not a single day's rain has fallen on the Upper Darling. All the waterholes and many of the tanks in the back country, away from the river, are dry. Even the saltbush, which flourishes when all green things around are perishing from drought, is dying. When and hew is this to end' The settlers have ample reason to feel anxious and alarmed.

Even the saltbush, which floughes when all green things around are perishing from droughes when all green things around are perishing from droughes when all green things around are perishing from droughes when all green things around are perishing from droughes when all green things around are not along the viver, reaching on the opposite banh, McCrae countries the day reached the river to McCree's, to inquire about Mr. M'Intyre. I found be had left this station for Mount Murchies nome days before, leaving some instructions for my guidance.

19th August.—Acting upon these, crossed the entire party, men, horses, camels and baggage, in the forenon; it me men and loading by boat, the horses swan across and the camels forded the river. We had great difficulty in overcoming the honest objection of these lumbering ereatures to water. Belooch coaxed, harangued and, finally, raved at them in Hindoostance—alas, in vain they would not go. So then we pushed the two leading camels bodily into the stream. A horseman, in advance, kept up an unmerciful strain on their nose-strings, and we assailed them in the rear with sticks, stones and shouts. They crossed slowly and surely, feeling the bottom with their big seet ere they made a fresh step in advance. Those remaining followed their comrades without hesitation. The crossing occupied about two hours in all. We then reparked and started up the river, along which we travelled about twelve miles before camping.

Bunday, 20th August.—This day being Sunday, I read things had gone on well so far glad bose me; pleased that things had gone on well so far glad to see me; pleased that things had gone on well so far glad to see me; pleased that things had gone on well so for glad to see me; pleased that things had gone on well so for glad to see me; pleased that things had gone on well so for glad to see me; pleased the river, three miles beyond Mount Murchieson. This must be considered a very satisfactory return from the Otage gold-fields, considering the late exodus, and one representing a much larger yield per man than has yet been realised on the West Coast diggings.

On the 5th instant, while a mason was engaged in lifting a large flagging-stone, in a gully near the Oamsur Parsonage, he had the good fortune to make a lucky discovery. Undernseth the stone, he found a green-stone tomahawk of large dimensions, beautifully polished and shaped, and quite perfect in every respect. It measures nearly a foot in length, by three inches across the face, and is about three-quarters of an inch thick, unless where sloped, or on the edge, which is very shap. It is considered one of the best specimens of this implement of Maori warfare which have been seen, and, doubless, is very valuable. The purity of the green-stone might have been greater, but on the whole the curiosity has been much admired by all who have inspected it. The place where it was found (from the position of the large stone) is supposed to have been the grave of some Maori chief, who had been consigned to his last resting place, accompanied by this warlike weapon, on his mysterious journey to the "happy hunting grounds of the faithful."

The Daily Times of the 5th extracts the following from Mr. Warden Hickson's report from Upper Mannherskia of the 30th ultimo:—"The weather continues favourable for mining operations, which are being once more carried on with energy. The Blackstone Hill Water Race Company's flume is being rapidly re-erected, and it is expected to be completed very shortly. The Scandinavian Water Race, Dunstan Creek, is very near its completion; it is very well made, and will be one of the finest races on the gold-fields."

To the Editor of the Heraid.

Sin,—In the Heraid of Tuesday last there is a very interesting letter from Mr. T. S. Mort, on the subject of "Mr. Blaziand's Dried Bed" On reading that letter the thought struck me, it is just the thing which I and others like me, who are burthened with large families and small incomos, require.

Having at present to travel upwards of seven miles for every pound of butcher's meat I consume, and then receiving an inferior article at a very high price. I would feel grateful to Mr. Mert or any person who would inform me and the public through your journal, where Mr. Blaxland's dried beef is to be purchased, and in what quantity and price it is now sold at.

If the beef could be had now, in quantities of fifty pounds and upwards, at a moderate price, it would be a great boon to poor semilies; amongst others.

Your obedient servant,

(From the London Daily News, August 26th.)
The committee of the Emancipation Society have issued the following address, announcing the dissolution of that association:—
TO THE MENIRRO OF THE EMANCIPATION SOCIETY.
Gentlemen,—Nearly three years have elapsed since the preliminary meeting was held which resulted in the organisation of the Emancipation Society. The conference to which we ullude was attended by some twenty or thirty gentlemen who were deeply impressed with the conviction that many of our leading journals and public men were imbued with wholly erroneous and mischievous views of the origin, the nature, and the objects of the war which then distracted the United States, and that there was grave danger, not only that these unsound opinions and the studied misrepresentations with which they were accompanied might provoke serious misunderstandings, if not actual hostilities, between the two sations, but that they might place this country in a position of antagonism to that great cause of freedom and civilisation with which its best interests are inseparably identified. They moreover believed that whatever surface opinions might appear to exist, whatever prejudices might be nursed in coteries or prevail among certain classes of politicians who could have no feeling of sympathy with the principles that were embodied in the contest which the loyal States were waging with a haughty and barbarous slave power, the heart of the British people would prove to be as sound as it was when Clarkson and Wilberforce appealed from a West India Parliament to the popular conscience. The resolution adopted by the meeting which was held in London on the 11th of November, 1862, reads thus:—"That this meeting, being impressed with the importance of adopting means to counteract the alleged sympathy of this country with the so-called Southern Confederacy of America, and especially to encourage the United States Government in the prosecution of an emancipation policy, resolves itself into a society to carry out the above-named obj they suffered severe privations from the cotton famine, resisted all the efforts which were insidiously made to induce them to assist the movement for the recognition of the South, and gave their warmest sympathy to the cause of union and emancipation. The conduct of the working classes throughout Great Britain was equally admirable; and while our movement was sustained by the enthusiastic support of the masses, it was not less sanctioned by the approval and active co-operation of many names which are illustrious in the intellectual world. The result of our united labours was seen in the failure of every attempt which was made by the able and untiring partisans of the South to compel 'the Government to adopt a policy of interference under the guise of recognising the independence of the slaveholders' confederacy. It was seen in the more stringent measures adopted by the Government to enforce English neutrality, and notably in the seizure of the steam rams. It was seen ultimately in the despair of those who had hoped to employ England as the lever by which to achieve the success of an unprovoked and a nefarious rebellion. The dream of a slave empire is now dispelled. Not only has the pro-slavery Government established at Richmond so utterly collapsed than to trace of its existence can be discovered, save in the misery which it has occasioned, but negro slavery itself has perished; and a war which was begun for the extension and consolidation of the most ruthless system of oppression the world had ever seen has ended in the emancipation of every slave. So far, then, as the peculiar work of our society is concerned, it is practically accomplished; and in resolving that our existence as an association shall be formally dissolved, it only remains for us to thank our friends and fellow-labourers for the good service they have rendered, and to express the hope that the great republic may long enjoy peace and prosperity, and that equal laws may be re-established throughout the now re-United States and territories of th

August, 1865. A LEGACY OF A MILLION.—Probably the largest personalty ever sworn for probate was that of the late Mr. Morrison, of Basildon. Besides the business in Fore-street, and vast landed estates, he bequeathed to his eldest son a direct legacy of a million, which is said to be the only legacy on record to that amount. Like most of those who amass enormous wealth, Mr. Morrison began the world with nothing. In fact there seems to be no receipt for becoming a millionaire equal to that of walking up to London barefoot, under a firm conviction that its streets are paved with gold. In the dining-room of his house at Hasildon, in Berkshire, which the traveller to Bath passes on the left as he flies by the beautiful reach of the Thames, just above Paughourse, and which shounds with splendid works of art, the very chairs and tables being from the design of some great R.A., there are two pillars of a rare and beautiful marble, which originally stood in a church in Italy, where great store was set by them; but the church being out of repair and in need of funds, at length sought and obtained permission from Rome to sell the pillars to the wealthy Eaglishman who had set his heart on possessing them. The cost of conveyance was enormously difficult and expensive by reason of the extraordinary weight of the columns, which in several places broke into the roads over which they were carried. The stery illustrates the energy of the man in getting what he had set his heart upon. Nearly the whole of the Isle of Islay, Fonthill Abbey, and vast estates scattered through half the counties in England, are the result of the same energy. Mr. Morrison's wealth would have enabled him to have lived in the utmost splendour; but, though a liberal patron of the arts, he shrank from display, and was utterly free from tuft-hunting, and loved best the society of artists and men of letters. Up to the time of his will being proved, personal property was not liable to duty above a million; but the fact of his property being nearly four times that amount, perhaps suggested to the authorities the expediency of extending the scale, which was accordingly done in August, 1859, and £1500 on each additional £100,000. Since this enactment only one will above a million has been proved, that of the late Mr. H. Gurney, which suggested to the authorities the expediency of extending the scale, which was accordingly done in August, 1859, and the duty now payable upon a million is $15,000, and £1500 on each additional £100,000. Since this enactment only one will above a million has been proved, that of the late Mr. H. Gurney, which was sworn under £1,100,000. It will be seen from this that millionaires are, at their death at all events, of some little service to the public.—Fraser's Magazine for August.

A Finical Suicide.—A young man, about thirty years of age, respectably dressed, and having on him a gold watch and chain and about 40f. in money, was discovered hanging from a tree yesterday morning in the Bois de Boulogne. In one of his pockets we found the following singular sote, written with a pencil:—"To the Age; to the Curious; to the Retailers of News,—Astonishment will be expressed at seeing a man commit suicide at thirty. It is neither want, idleness, nor love that has driven me to fling away my existence. I am a workman, and gain my livelihood well enough. I came to Paris, where I have been employed several years, therefore I am neither poer nor lays. But tastes above my education would prevent me from living as I should wish, and, sbove all, from marrying well." The young man, it turns out, was a native of Aix-la-Chapelle, and lived in a lodging-house in the Rue de Bouls!. He had been dead, to all appearance, seven or eight hours.—Paris Paper.—Chanraone from 1 rue Butriss Public.—A chemisf within the postal district has recently been purchasing low French white wine or sherry, with which the market is at present glutted. The operator places it in bottles of the orthodex shape, and submits it to the action of a sodawater machine, by which it is copiously charged with carbenic acid, giving it the required degree of effervescence, which of course disappears soon after the bottle is opened. A tinfoil capsule and an attractive label are then added, which render this exhilarating beverage fit for the market, where, to our knowledg

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD.—Sir.—Allow me to treepass on some few inches of your valuable paper. There have appeared in several late issues of the Extrice, namely on the 12th, 18th, 20th, and 21st instant, severally, paragraphs of one kind and another touching the late fire at Pyrmont. These all emanate from members of the No. 1 Volunteer Pire Company, and each and all inveigh more or less bitterly against Mr. Alderman Bown, Superintendent of the Insurance Fire Brigade. Now, I do not in the least wish on the one hand to depreciate or undervalue the services of the No. 1 Volunteer Pire Company, and the services of the No. 1 Volunteers at his or at any other fire. Nor do I require on the other hand to exalt those of Mr. Bown. He is too well known in his profession, both here and at home, to require any praise at my hands. What I merely want is truth—and that the No. 1 Volunteers seem to overlook in their assertions to the public. And to begin. Their first complaint is that Mr. T. J. Bown and "they had no business at Pyrmont." Now in this case Mr. Bown was consulting with Mr. Puckeridge, the ewner of the burning property, as to what insurance he had, &c., as was his duty to do, and merely told some of the more inquisitive members of the No. 1 Volunteers that he was engaged then on business, with which they, as Volunteers, had no concern. The next complaint is that Mr. Bown's brigade there water over the Velunteers, thereby impeding them in their duty. It's always allowed in all quarters, it's said,
M'Carroll's the man who can lead all the trade;
It before he surpassed with the primest of beef,
This week he'll come out as commander-in-chief.
He has such supplies of the finest of meat
That cannot be equalled, we'll not say be beat,
And at such low prices the people all own.
There's none can sell like him, which weekly is shown.
To-day, no mistake, he'll astonish the crowd,
With shops so supplied he may justly feel proud.
The great Redfern Depot, with shambles borne down,
Will display quite enough to supply a whole town;
At Cumberland-street, and at Woelloomeoloo,
With Botany shop, will share in it too.
Each and all prove this week what cannot be denied,
There's no other shop like those are supplied;
And all ranks of people now bolely declare
To one or the other they find their way there;
And those who live distant much more than a mile
To travel that distance they find worth their while;
The saving they make in the price is so great,
They go to M'Carroll's both early and late,
And say, when at home with their baskets returned,
A shilling well saved is a shilling well earned;
It sides to the poor man's hard-earned weekly wage;
To save is to make, are the words of the sage.
With six shope full of meat, and the prices all down,
M'Carroll can serve all the wants of the town.
